

Proposed Changes to Site

Site Restructure

Proposed site structure

A reorganised architecture that merges duplicates, surfaces hidden pages, and creates clear user paths.

PROPOSED PRIMARY NAVIGATION (6 ITEMS MAX)

Home

Services ▾

Tours ▾

Fleet

About ▾

Book Now

Primary Navigation (6 Items)

A reorganised architecture that merges duplicates, surfaces hidden pages, and creates clear user paths.

PROPOSED PRIMARY NAVIGATION (6 ITEMS MAX)

Home

Services ▾

Tours ▾

Fleet

About ▾

Book Now

SERVICES DROPDOWN

- 1 /services/airport-transfer — dedicated page (split from /services)
- 2 /services/point-to-point — dedicated page (split from /services)
- 3 /services/hourly — dedicated page (split from /services)
- 4 /services/custom — dedicated page (split from /services)

Each page gets its own pricing, highlights, and direct "Book" CTA

TOURS DROPDOWN (CURRENTLY /CHARTER-1)

- 1 /tours — catalog with region + theme filters (keep existing /charter-1 content, fix placeholder)
- 2 /tours/custom — custom itinerary request form (currently /customized-booking-form)
- 3 /tours/kanto & /tours/kansai — regional landing pages

ABOUT DROPDOWN (MERGING /ABOUT + /PROFILE)

- 1 /about — Brand story, philosophy, EV roadmap, language support (keep from current /about)
- 2 /about/company — Legal entity, addresses, license numbers, CEO greeting (move from current /profile)
- 3 /about/crew — Driver qualifications, crew philosophy (currently buried in /about)

SURFACES THAT NEED PROMOTING OUT OF FOOTER

- /offers (rename from /sale) — link from homepage hero and header banner, not just footer
- /pricing — should be accessible from Services pages and main nav
- /blog — if active, add to footer nav prominently or About dropdown
- /contact — already in header, good — but add direct email addresses in plain text

LEGAL PAGES (KEEP IN FOOTER, FIX VISIBILITY)

- /legal/terms — keep, link from booking confirmation steps
- /legal/safety-policy — keep, surface in About/Company page
- /legal/transaction-act — add English translation alongside Japanese text

HomePage Layout

Recommended modifications to improve the current homepage.

The homepage has one job for ZEN GO's audience — most visitors are inbound tourists or business travelers who've just landed on the site from a search or referral. They need to immediately understand what ZEN GO is, trust it, and find their way to a booking. Right now the homepage tries to do too much at once and buries the most important actions under a lot of scrolling.

Here's the section order I'd recommend, and the reasoning behind each:

- 1. Hero — above the fold The single most important real estate on the site. It should contain the brand name and a one-line value proposition (something like "Premium private car service across Japan"), the two primary CTAs side by side — "Book Airport Transfer" and "Browse Tours" — and a language selector since the audience is international. That's it. No carousels, no animations, no secondary content competing for attention here.
- 2. Trust bar — immediately below the hero A thin horizontal strip with four or five quick-scan credentials: Japan Transport Bureau certified, multilingual support (Japanese, English, 中文, 한국어, Español), all-inclusive pricing, EV fleet available, established since 2019. This section exists to answer the unspoken question every first-time visitor has: can I trust this company? It should be compact and scannable — icons with short labels, nothing more.
- 3. Services — what we offer Four clear tiles, one per service type: Airport Transfer, Chartered Tours, Point-to-Point, and Custom Trips. Each tile should have a photo, a one-sentence description, and a direct link to that service's dedicated page. This section replaces the current cluttered "What We Offer" block which mixes descriptions with sample itineraries and pricing all at once.
- 4. Airport Transfer pricing preview This is actually one of the strongest sections on the current homepage — the pricing grid for major airport routes is genuinely useful and helps visitors self-qualify quickly. Keep it, but tighten it. Show the most common routes (Narita↔Tokyo, Haneda↔Tokyo, KIX↔Osaka/Kyoto) with the discounted price prominently and a single "Book Now" button per route. Move the full route list to the dedicated Airport Transfer page.

5. Featured Tours A curated grid of six to eight tours — not all forty, just the most popular or seasonally relevant ones — with photo, tour name, region tag, and a theme badge (Family Friendly, Nature, Cultural Journey, etc.). This section sells the experience side of ZEN GO and leads into the full tour catalog. Include a "See all tours" link.

6. Why ZEN GO — differentiators The current site has this content but it's placed too late and styled too generically. The six selling points (compliance & safety, easy booking, sustainability, transparent pricing, fleet variety, multilingual service) should be presented here as a clean grid. This section works best after services and tours have already created desire — it reinforces the decision rather than leading with it.

7. Current promotions The three active offers (sign-up coupon, airport + charter bundle, eSIM giveaway) are genuinely good conversion tools but are currently scattered. Grouping them into one dedicated section with clear expiry signals and CTAs makes them far more effective. This sits toward the bottom because it rewards visitors who've already shown interest by scrolling — it shouldn't compete with the primary service messaging at the top.

8. Contact / inquiry shortcuts The three-category contact block (Personal, Corporate, Partnership) that currently appears in the footer of every page works well as a homepage section too. Keep it here as the final call-to-action before the footer, for visitors who didn't find a ready-made service that fit their needs.

Footer Standard: logo, service links, about links, legal links (Terms, Safety Policy, Transaction Act), office addresses, payment methods accepted, and social/chat channels. The footer should not be where users discover major pages like Pricing or Blog — those need to be in the main nav.

The key structural principle throughout is one decision per section. The current homepage asks visitors to simultaneously absorb pricing, read tour descriptions, understand the company philosophy, and find a booking button — all competing at the same scroll depth. The proposed order above follows a natural decision funnel: What is this? → Can I trust it? → What do I need? → How much does it cost? → What experiences are available? → Why choose them? → Is there a deal? → How do I get in touch?

Recommended next steps

- Priority 1 Add XML sitemap listing all pages including all /car-travel/ tour URLs — submit to Google Search Console
- Priority 1 Fix all page title tags to read "ZEN GO | [Page name]"
- Priority 2 Add JSON-LD schema: LocalBusiness on homepage, TouristTrip on each tour page, BreadcrumbList on all pages
- Priority 2 Add English translation to /legal/transaction-act for completeness
- Priority 3 Add hreflang tags for ja / en / zh / ko / es to signal multilingual pages to Google
- Priority 3 Set canonical URLs on each service page to prevent any Wix-generated parameter URLs from splitting rankings

- ◆ Set Book Now CTA on every page - visible in primary nav
- ◆ /about and /profile merged into one clean /about section with 3 sub-pages (third one being blog or "Featured")
- ◆ /services split into 4 dedicated pages — each with own URL, title, and Book CTA

The single biggest SEO gain from the restructure is the split of `/services` into four dedicated pages. In the old site, Google saw one page trying to rank for airport transfers, sightseeing tours, hourly hire, and custom trips simultaneously — those are completely different search intents, and the signals cancel each other out. With four separate pages, each one can rank independently for its own keyword cluster and build authority over time without competing with itself.